Win the White House Extension Pack

Learning Objectives. Students will be able to:

- Explain the electoral process (primary and general elections, Electoral College)
- Identify the influence of the media in forming public opinion
- Describe the various sources and uses of campaign funding
- Describe the types and purposes of polling data
- Analyze how parts of a whole interact to produce outcomes in complex systems

Time Needed: Approx. 3 class periods

Materials/Equipment:
- Microsoft PowerPoint
- Access to iCivics.org for game play
- Interactive white board (optional but ideal)
- Teaching bundle PowerPoint presentation
- Student worksheets

Copy Instructions:
Student Activities (2 pages; class set)
Assessment (1 page; class set)

Preparation
Download the PowerPoint presentation. It contains all the activities for the teaching bundle.

Photocopy and distribute the paper version of the student activities if you want students to have them. (You can teach the bundle without paper if you wish.)

1. Starter Activity
Display the slides for Activity One: “The Candidate’s Mind Map.”
Ask students to brainstorm their ideas on the paper handout, then call on students to write their ideas on the board.
Save a copy of the slide with the students’ ideas if you are using an interactive whiteboard.
Review the list using the teacher notes provided within the PowerPoint

2. Mini-Lesson
Display the slides for Activity Two: “Ingredients of a Campaign.”
Allow students to take turns reading through the slides, discussing each slide as they go. Stop and clarify language or questions as the class progresses through the slides.
Ask students to note what they’ve learned on their paper handout.

3. Game
Direct students to iCivics.org and have them play the game Win the White House. Alternatively, you can try having the class play as a group using your interactive whiteboard. (If there is time, have them play once as a Democrat and once as a Republican.)

4. Follow-Up Activities
Display the slides for Activity Three: “Candidates do what? When?” Call on students to come to the board and move the tasks to the correct stage of a campaign. (You will need to turn off presentation mode on PowerPoint.)
If you wish, have them complete the paper version first.
There are additional discussion starters at the end of the Win the White House Game Guide if you have time and want to dig deeper into the game experience.

5. Assessment
Work through the Mini Quiz slides, pausing to discuss and review with each slide.
Distribute and assign the paper version of the assessment if you wish.

Answers may vary:
- Candidate support
- Momentum
- Supported issues
- Opposed issues
Here are some additional resources for getting the conversation started before and after your students play the game. These questions and more information can also be found in the Game Guide for Win the White House, available on the Teacher landing page for the game.

Pre-Game Questions
You can use these questions to lead into playing Win the White House in the classroom.

- What are political parties? Why do they exist?
- What do candidates have to do to get elected?
- Why do candidates have to fundraise as part of a campaign? What is the money for?
- How do candidates choose campaign issues?
- What is a primary? How is it different than a regular election?

Post-Game Questions
Use these questions as a way to debrief the individual experiences of playing Win the White House.

- Which states did you spend most of your time conducting campaign activities in? Why?
- Why would a candidate choose not to campaign in a state?
- What is momentum, why does it change when you work in a state?
- Why do you think personal appearances are considered more effective than advertisements in the game? Do you think this is like real life? Why?
- Does the campaign process give all Americans the chance to learn about a candidate and make an informed decision? Why or why not?
- What role do political parties play in an election?

Activity Idea
- Direction to students: Pretend you are running for student body president. Create an ad for the election. The ad can be a flyer or short speech. Then, answer these questions at the bottom of the page.
  - What is the purpose of your ad?
  - What did you want people to know from your ad?
  - How is your ad similar to what a presidential candidate would make? How is it different?
